Instead of this, up to the ent time there has been no endeavour to justhe pretended defensive character of the Ausarmaments by specifying any signs of a rar, against which defensive : measures should irected. The secresy with which the Austria: rinaments have been surrounded, and the efto make their well known extent appear in eyes of the Prussian government less importhan it actually is, has only strengthened the arel impression respecting them, namely, that imperial treops on the northern frontier of strin, which have been daily reinforced during hat formight, are destined for an offensive tile undertaking against Prussia. Notwithnding this, the Prussian government delayed ten days, vis., till the 36th mit., the isave o ers to prepare measures of defence, because King, the undersigned's most gracious sovern.foresaw that the accumulation of military forin front of one another would more seriausly enyer pence than sould have been the case until o'through the exchange of diplomatic despats. Only when through the number and position of Austrian troops on the Bobemian frontier, the sty of the Prussian territory threatened to bena dependent upon the resolutions of the Austricabinet, thid his Majesty order measures to be to for the protection of the country, at the no time taking note of the fact that it was the etring government which, from motives, up till s unexpiained, had by military menage placed Penesian frontier in a situation of danger, for igh no presedent is to be found in the politics international intercourse of Europe, and for ich the Prussian government must decidedly ect every responsibility. Mr. Gladstone made a speech at Liverpool or the eight of April 6th The occasion was a denunstration in support of the Government Reform Bill, which was beld in the Amphitheatre, Mr. J. C. Ewart in the chair. A resolution was agreed to dec'aring that the bill deserves general and hearty support as an honest and practicable proposal towards an amendment of the laws resting to the representation of the people. Mr. Gladstone told the meeting that the Government in proposing the bill had two objects in view. One of them was the improvement of the camp sition of the House of Commons ; the other to strengthen the House of Commons itself, and along with the House of Commons every other institution of the country, by marshalling a larger share of the energy, the intelligence, and the ohar over of the people of the country in support of evil per se, only to be encountered for the sake of proof granite Treasury, and besides several go-Commons as at present o imposed was not an ef- the storage of Opium or other valuable goods. b lent body as a condition of their supporting Reform. But Mr. Gladstone declined to rest his case on any such casis. He would not allow that the House of Commons was inefficient. It had done great good ever since the Reform Ant and evan hefere, but that was no more reason why it should not be improved than the faut that a mercantile undertaking was successful would be resson why its returns should no be increased if they could be with prodence; or than the fact that un estate which yielded £1,000 a year was a reason why it should not be made, by draining and other applications of increased capital, to yield £2,000 It was objected that the bill was not complete. " But," said Mr. Gludstone. " the persons who refuse to be content with anything leasthan the whole bill are the very same persons who ! heartily detest the very part which we have premine to them . This is the secret or the outery which you now hear. We have promised to make known the views which we entertain on the sub-Beat, which must excite great interest in general. and especially in Liverpool, viz., that of the redistribution of scats, but knowing those with had let May. "The redistribution of Possessi m can had immediately... sents," the right hon; gentlemen continued, " has assumed a most fortunate position. It stands even for the moment in the good, graces of those who never liked radistribution of seats before, but who, I fear, will continue to retain their liking | for it but a very short time longer. You will see ham Street; suitable for a office or dwelling. that when the views of the Government on this question are sested, they will be found in the estimution of this portion of the community to be very unsound indeed. And, in point of fact, the yery persons who contend that we have committed guilty in the face of the country by producing Paper. only out half of our Reform Bill, will say when we come to produce the other half, that our guilt will be greater still." Mr. Gladstone argued that he was no more called upon to assign reasons for A. Apply to... introducing this bill thin Lord Clarence Pages | tf 607 Hunglong, 31st March, 1866, was called upon when he moved the Navy catimates to give a dissertation upon the mecessity of mulntaining a Navy. In the first place, the fact that a measure of Reform bad been so often und so solemnly promised was in itself a enfilcient reason. But it had intrinsic merit as simng at the rodress of a grievamon. It was only under protest that Mr. Gladstone would consent ! to argue on the share the working classes had in the representation of the country, because he declined to recognize those disting joils which are ungenerou ly and off insively asserted to exist in this happy country between olass and olass. With this reservation, however, he would contend that the working classes had not their fair proportion come of the working classes—he would say nothing about their numbers less he should be charged with demogracy-amounted to something between £200,000,000 and £250,000,000 a year, while that of the classes above their was from £300,000,000 to £350,000 000. Now, if that were so it followed that the income of the working classes was something like five-twelfths-not very short of one-half-something lik firs-twelths, or threesevenths of the whole income of the country; that is to any, that our of every £7 of income, £3 are received by a wirking man. Again, it was Mr. Gindstone's opinion-and he had had some meuns of judging-that not less than one third-of the £68,000,000 at which our revenue now stands is contributed by the working population. He asked, then, with what justice the working population could be required to pay that proportion of taxon.
